[G]Grace Cathedral hill, all wrapped [Em]in bones of a setting sun, all dust and [C]stone and moribund. I paid twenty-five [D]cents to light a little white [D7]candle, for a New [G]Year's Day. I sat and watched it burn [Em]away then turned and weaved through slow [C]decay.
We were both a little [D]hungry so we [D7]went to get a hotdog. Down the Hyde St. [G]Pier, the light was [Em]slight and dissapeared. The air it stunk of [C]fish and beer. We [D]heard a superman trumpet play the [D7]National Anthem.

[C]And the world may belong [G]for you, but [Em]it'll [C] never belong to [G]you. But on a [Em]motorbike, [C]when [Cm] all the city lights blind your [D]eyes tonight, [D7]are you feeling better [C]now? .....Are you [D]feeling [G]be...ttttter..[Em]noooooww.
Are you feeling better [C]now? [Cm]

VERSE 2 Some way to greet the year: your eyes all bright and brimmed with tears. The pilgrims, pills and tourist here all sing
"Fifty three bucks to buy a brand new halo."
Sweet on a green-eyed girl, all fiery Irish clip and curl, all brine and piss and vinegar. I paid twenty-five cents to light a little white candle.

And the world maybe be long for you, but he'll never belong to you. But on a motorbike, when all the city lights blind your eyes, are you feeling better now?
